THE OBSERVATOR.

The Examiner's Reflection on the Houſe of Lords, for rejecting the Bill to repeal the Act of General Naturalization. The Falſhood of his Aſſertion, That we have been in more danger of a Republick ſince the Revolution, than of Popery and Slavery. A brief Recapitulation of the Practices of his Party to bring us under the latter. The Diſappointments of the Faction by the Proceedings of the Parliament, and by her Majeſty's Speech; which ſhew the Principles of the Ruin'd Party to be ſtill triumphant.

From Wedneſday, June 13. to Saturday, June 16. 1711.

Countrym. CASTING my eye upon the Examiner of the 7th, I took notice how bold he makes with the Houſe of Lords, for rejecting the Bill to repeal the Act of General Naturalization, which he ſays ſurpriz'd moſt People. Certainly this Writer muſt be furniſh'd with Armour of Proof, ſince he reflects ſo audaciouſly on the Lords for doing a thing ſo ungrateful to his Nine parts in Ten of the People; for that, we know, was the Examiner's Computation at his firſt ſetting out.

Obſ. I ſhall never wonder at the Examiner's ſaying any thing that comes in his head, Roger, ſince he has declar'd open War with Truth and Modeſty. Have not all his Papers been one continu'd Libel upon the Government ſince the Revolution? Is it not plain to every Man who reads his Performances, that the Tory Hegira, or Flight of Popery and Tyranny from this Iſland in 1688. is the Grand Æra from whence he dates all the Dangers that have threaten'd the Church, and all the Plots that have been form'd againſt the Monarchy? 'Tis not long ſince he told us that we have been in more hazard of a Republick, &c. from that time, than of Popery and Slavery. Could any Man of leſs Aſſurance than the Examiner have ventur'd at ſuch a manifeſt Untruth; conſidering how many Aſſaſſination and Invaſion Plots we have had by Papiſts and Jacobites in King William's and her Majeſty's Reign? Were not ſeveral of the Popiſh and High-Church Faction hang'd for ſuch Practices, and did they not confeſs and glory in them at the Gallows? Did they not take Arms for the late King James in Scotland, and encourage his Invaſion of Ireland? Did they not bring the French Fleet into our Channel, and manage things ſo, if we may believe the Earl of Torrington's Speech in the Houſe of Commons, as gave them a fair opportunity to ſurprize our Navy, and invade England? Did they not hang upon the Wheels of King William's Adminiſtration, and by their falſe Alarms of a Republican Plot, get all the chief Poſts of the Kingdom into their hands, an honeſt Parliament diſſolv'd, and a Tory one choſen? Did they not at the ſame time endeavour to betray that Glorious Prince into the hands of Aſſaſſins and Plotters, which oblig'd him again to change his Miniſtry? Did they not conſtantly keep him ſhort of Mony? Did they not what in them lay to make the Funds for carrying on the War ineffectual? Did they not endeavour what they could to ſave Sir John Fenwick, who was one of the chief Ringleaders of the Invaſion-Plot, and to prevent his being attainted, becauſe he and his Friends forg'd a counterfeit Whig-Plot to drown the Noiſe of a Popiſh and Jacobite one? Does not this ſtill appear by the Acts and Proceedings of Parliament? Did not the Party force K. William into an imperfect and inſecure Peace and Treaty of Partition? And did they not openly accuſe him as a Felon in Parliament for concluding it? Did they not impeach his Miniſtry for going into it, tho it appear'd by the Advice of the Lord S———rs to the King, that they foreſaw the ill Conſequences of it, and that nothing but the wretched Poſture into which the Tories had brought the Nation could have made them concur in it? Did not the High Party proſecute that Impeachment with ſo much heat and partiality, that while they were for lopping off the topping Whigs in the Upper Houſe, they did not ſay one word againſt the Members of the Lower, that were as much concern'd in it? Did not their own Lord Haverſham baffle the Faction in ſeveral Conferences upon that very account, and expoſe their odious Partiality to the view of the World? Did not the Tory Parliament, notwithſtanding the Clamour of the Faction againſt the Treaty of Partition, as giving too much advantage to France, proceed in ſuch a manner as if they were pleas'd that the Duke of Anjou ſhould quietly poſſeſs the whole Spaniſh Monarchy, which he had uſurp'd contrary to that Treaty? Did not the Faction oblige the Court by their indirect Practices to acknowledg him as King of Spain? Did not that method of proceeding put a force upon the Dutch to do the like, ſince they could not be ſure that we would join them againſt the Exorbitant Power of France, according to Treaties? Did not this encourage the French King treacherouſly to prefer K. Charles II's Will, forg'd by Cardinal Porto-Carero and other French Tools, to the Partition-Treaty; and immediately to ſeize the Spaniſh Netherlands, with the Dutch Gariſons? And did not thoſe Practices of the Tories oblige K. William to diſſolve their High-flying Parliament after one Seſſion; and in his laſt Speech, which we may well call one of his beſt Legacies to the Nation, bequeath us this neceſſary Caution, to beware of thoſe Men who were for a Popiſh Prince and a French Government? Did not our Glorious Deliverer, in order to ſecure us from the Deſigns of that Party, ſign a Commiſſion on his Death-Bed, to paſs the Act for ſettling the Proteſtant Succeſſion? Was that done in a Whig or a Tory Parliament? Did not the Faction, as ſoon as the Breath was out of that Prince's Body, exhauſt their whole Magazines of Slander upon his Memory; and beſides charging him with want of Affection to the Engliſh Nation, load him with a Reproach as if he had a deſign to ſet aſide her Majeſty from ſucceeding to the Crown? which put the Houſe of Lords to the trouble of appointing a Committee of their own Number to ſearch his Papers: and when they had done ſo, and made their Report to the Houſe, their Lordſhips unanimouſly agreed, that it was a villanous Slander; and addreſs'd her Majeſty, that the Author and Publiſhers of it ſhould be enquir'd after and proſecuted. Yet the Highflying Tool Sacheverel, in his Character of a Low Churchman, if I remember right, inſiſted upon the ſame Calumny, to poiſon the Minds of the People, and incenſe them against the Whigs, at the Election of the new Parliament which enſu'd.

Countrym. I remember all thoſe things very well, Maſter; and tho the Examiner and his Friends have ſuch treacherous Memories as to forget them, I hope others have not. I do likewiſe call to mind, 1. What Oppoſition was made by the Examiner's Friends to her Majeſty's declaring War againſt Spain, for ſetting the Duke of Anjou upon their Throne, contrary to ſolemn Oaths and Treaties. 2. What Objections they made to the Alliances, concluded afterwards with the Portugueſe, &c. for carrying on that War. 3. That the very firſt Seſſion of their Tory Parliament, after K. William's Death, a treaſonable Libel, call'd K. William's Exorbitant Grants, was dedicated to the Queen and the Houſe of Commons, declaring all that Prince's Laws for ſettling the Succeſſion to be void, becauſe his own Title was not good; and the Author had the Impudence to propoſe, That her Majeſty ſhould act as Guardian for her pretended Brother, to keep Foreigners from the Throne, and to lay down a Scheme how the Succeſſion of the St. Germains Family ſhould be ſecur'd; yet inſtead of being puniſh'd, my old Maſter us'd to ſay the Author was amply rewarded for his Pains, by ſome of the Examiner's Friends. 4. I remember very well, Maſter, that inſtead of carrying on the War with Vigour Abroad, the Party was for imbroiling us at Home, and that we had black Liſts publiſh'd of thoſe who kept a Correſpondence with the French Agent Pouſſin, and did all they could to ſet us together by the Ears with their Occaſional Bills and Tacks, out of a Pretext of Zeal for the Church, but really to undermine the State as founded upon the Revolution-bottom. 5. That the Faction in thoſe days libel'd her Majeſty and her Miniſtry as Weather-Cocks, made a Jeſt of her Motto Semper Eadem; and thoſe Practices were ſoon follow'd by the Scotch Gibberiſh Letter-Plot, and a French Invaſion, headed by the Pretender, and uſher'd in by the High-Church Memorial, and other treaſonable Pamphlets; ſuch as Leſley's ſeditious Rehearſal, threatning her Majeſty, That if the High-Church had not the Sway, her Nature would rebel againſt Principle, which they made good on the occaſion of Sacheverel's Tryal, upon the Mildneſs of his Sentence, and at the enſuing Elections, attended with Crouds of Addreſſes aſſerting the Church's Danger, contrary to her Majeſty's Proclamation, and the Reſolves of both Houſes, and offering a Surrender of our happy Limited Monarchy, for one that's Deſpotical and Abſolute, had they been capable of doing it, or could her Majeſty have been ſo far prevail'd upon to forget her Coronation-Oath, and the Bill of Rights, as to accept it at their Hands.

Obſ. All theſe things are very true, Roger, and irrefragably prove our Danger from Popery and Slavery, if the Examiner and his Friends could get their Will. By this brief Recapitulation of the Practices of the Party, our People at Home, and our Allies Abroad, may ſee how much they are oblig'd to them, and what dependance they can have upon them, to ſupport our own Liberties and thoſe of Europe. By theſe things the Family of Hanover may alſo gueſs at the meaning Highflying Party, and their good Will them, by reviving the exploded Doctrines mited Paſſive-Obedience, and Indefeaſible, Hereditary Right of Lineal Succeſſion, to the Statutes, which ſettle the Reverſion Crown upon that illuſtrious Houſe, as the ſelves very well know.

Countrym. I can't chuſe but laugh, Ma ſee how the Faction is diſappointed of the Expectations, notwithſtanding their inſol umphs; for the Houſe of Commons have knock'd their Scheme of Unlimited and Power on the Head, by aſſerting their Right of having the ſole and undoubted Pr granting Mony, and adjuſting and limiting portions of it. This is far from reverſing rel's Sentence, and eſtabliſhing his ſlaviſh as the Faction expected; and however in the Repreſentations of this Parliam certainly ſtrike at the Root of Deſpotical ment, and of the High-Church Principle is unlawful to reſiſt the Prince, or thoſe w Commiſſion, on any pretence whatſoever cording to theſe Repreſentations it would be lawful to reſiſt the Prince himſelf, o ſhould be ſent by him with Privy Seals, the Mony out of our Pockets, without Parliament, as was practis'd when the were rampant in the Reign of Charl are alſo terribly mortify'd by her M peated Promiſe of ſupporting the Ha ſion, which is diametrically oppoſite to feaſible Hereditary Right. This, tog her Royal Aſſurance, that the Liberty ſenters is in no danger from the preſent is a Thunderſtroke upon the Rabble parts of the Iſland, and enough to make de Profundis, to ſee the Principles of Party ſtill triumphant; while ſome o M——rs and others muſt go home, Friends the melancholy Tidings, that having the Church of Scotland ſunk, nour to kiſs the Pretender's Hand, and thron'd according to their Expectation came up, they don't find their Party h enough to propoſe it, or ſtrength enou it, without help from France, which ma gerous Conſequence, open the Eyes of Mob, and turn 'em as much againſt t Highfliers, as ever they thought they Obſ. The Britiſh Conſtitution has alwa ſtrong at laſt, Roger, for whoever attemp throw. I make no doubt, for all the Ra facto and profeſs'd Jacobites, and the mig tion they had from the Aſſiſtance of the cuting and arbitrary Principles, but th with further Diſappointments; and t they think fit to try the Overthrow of t Succeſſion either by Fraud or Force, the Majeſty and the Houſe of Hanover as m match for 'em, as the late K. James fou Orange; which may give the Examiner a occaſion to make a new Æra, and begi lancholy Calculation of time from the Popery and Slavery, that may be ever grateful to them as the new Office for Common-Prayer-Book, wherein the Ch her Thanks to God for ſending the Pr. of day, to deliver her from Popery, Tyran Power, and making all Oppoſition to fall b became our King and Governor. An Offic will for ever be too hard for Sacheve other Apoſtles of Slavery, who wo Doctrine of the Church of England, to falſe Principles, that 'tis unlawful to on any pretence whatſoever.

From the Camp of the Germans at Munkenſturm, June 12. The 9th of this Month 12 Regiments of the Enemy's Horſe and 2 of Foot paſs'd the Rhine at Kehl, as did 6 other Regiments of Horſe at Sehlingen: The firſt encamp'd in the Neighbourhood of Wildſtad, and the others near the Iſle of Sehlingen. The Duke of Wirtemberg being inform'd of it, advanced towards that Iſland with all his Horſe, Grenadiers, and 2000 Foot, to endeavour to attack the Enemy; but finding them too advangiouſly encamped, he contented himſelf with Foraging the Country before them. A Party of the Enemy of 200 Horſe, who at that time were abroad for Intelligence, were defeated in their Retreat: About 60 were made Priſoners, among them 2 Captains, 2 Lieutenants, and 100 Horſes were taken; ſeveral of the Troopers of that Party were kill'd likewiſe, ſo that very few got off. Seven Regiments of French Horſe and Dragoons, with a like Number of Battallions, are encamp'd at Hagenbach, but 'tis believ'd they will alſo paſs the Rhine there.
